President Taft's order, and a letter from Secretary Fisher to Mr. Valentine, which accompanies it, lay stress on the fact that Commissioner Valentine issued his ruling without consulting the Secretary or the President, and while the entire subject was under investigation. Mr. Fisher's revocation of the order now is made final.

President Taft's Order.

President Taft's order follows: "In January of this year the commissioner of Indian affairs issued an order to superintendents in charge of Indian schools directing that all insignia of the members of any denomination wearing a distinctive garb should not tary of the Interior and the commissioner of Indian affairs, and although highwaymen in a red touring car held the Secretary had submitted the matter to me for discussion, the commissioner of Indian affairs finally acted on his first received the approval of either the Secretary or myself. The issue, theref e, is persons engaged in teaching Indians in enable a physician to keep in touch with the government Indian schools. and and, on the other hand, to leave to the civil service should be required to lay off their distinctive religious garb After electrical connections have been while they render service as govern-made the patient's hand is placed in a ment teachers. "The Secretary of the Interior, after a very full and patient consideration, has reached the conclusion, stated in a letter to the commissioner of Indian affairs, that the order ought not to be made, and that those persons who are now engaged in teachingn in government schools as embers of the government civil service. and who are wearing the garb, should be permitted to remain in the service and while discharging their duties to wear the garb. I concur in this view, and the order as revoked will not be revived.

Secretary Fisher's Discussion.

"The Secretary of the Interior goes into very full discussion of the whole history of the conditions surrounding the teaching in government Indian schools. It is evident that at first the government gave very little care or attention to the teaching of Indians, and was quite willng to accept the services of any reary work which would take charge of the education of Indians and give them secinstill moral and religious principles in ernment itself to assume the burden of the education of the Indians and to direct what it should consist in, and it is evident from acts of Congress that it was and is the settled intention of Con- of statutory or constitutional law. gress that the general education of the ndians shall be secular and non-sectarian and that their religious instruction shall e separate and left to the volition of the Indians and to the care of the denominations to whose communion they belong. rom sectarian to government instruction, the ultimate purpose has not always been strictly held in view, and it has been a frequent method to transfer a whole denomination, to government control, and to include in the transfer all he teachers who had been engaged in ncorporate them as a whole and as in-

they have assumed that garb. Purpose of Congress.

"The Secretary of the Interior holds, as matter of congressional policy, that all of a garb distinctive of such membership. orders hereafter made should be directed toward securing the secular and non-sectarian character of teaching; that this is not constitute an established religion, pair the separation of church and The decision of the President is that state. He sustains this view by considered case decided by the supreme court of Pennsylvania. He therefore finds that to allow the present members of the civil service who wear a distinctive garb the service. This ruling, the President to remain in the service until such time law or statue, and that while the method when religious schools were taken over of transfer was a mistaken one, the circumstances surrounding them constitute an equity in favor of those who are now in the service and are wearing the garb schools; by filling all new positions and which should prevent their being excluded from the service by such an inhi-No Order Necessary.

In the exercise of his lawful discretion as Secretary of the Interior, therefore, and in order more certainly to secure purely non-sectarian teaching in the schools, the evident object and aim of congressional legislation on the subject any denomination be removed from all he believes it wiser that hereafter no public rooms of such schools, and that such transfers in solido of school plane and teachers of any denomination to the government school should be made, and that no set of teachers wearing distincwear it while engaged in lay duties as tive religious garb should be by order in government employes. Although the the future incorporated into the governpropriety of such an order had been ment civil service of teachers. His opin inder the consideration of the Secre- ion is that while it is neither unlawful nor impossible for teachers in a distinctly religious garb to do non-sectarian teach ing, it makes, as between denominations interested that only secular teaching be given, for more apparent equality of own responsibility, without having treatment not to increase or to add to those now in the service who wear a religious and denominational garb. This solution, it seems to me, is very equitable as to existing conditions, is quite in accordance with the purpose of the Interior Department to do equity and at the same time to carry out the congressional intent. "The action of the Secretary of the In terior is, therefore, approved. "WM. H. TAFT."
